Trevallyn Primary School – Apology for Christmas Social Media Posts

Ms ROSOL question to PREMIER

My question is on behalf of the Trevallyn Primary School, who are unable to defend themselves. Premier, two weeks ago, Pulse Media published an article claiming Trevallyn Primary School was ditching Christmas. Despite this being patently false and a total misrepresentation of the beautiful work of inclusion and listening at the school, you amplified the story with a social media post claiming schools were removing all references to Christmas in end-of-year celebrations. The result was a torrent of abuse and threats against the acting principal and school. The school community has suffered enormously as a result of your posts. Rather than apologise, you have tripled down with more misleading social media posts. Will you acknowledge the pain and distress you caused the staff, students and parents at Trevallyn Primary School? Will you apologise for your posts and for using schools as collateral in your efforts to shore up your standing with members of your party and conservative voters?
